

It has come to our attention various individuals and organizations are sending emails to people offering false employment opportunities with New Directions Behavioral Health. This scam involves creating and communicating through social accounts, visiting the www.ndbh.com website and references emails from email accounts not associated with New Directions. The individuals and organizations request personal and bank account information. Please do not engage with individuals offering unsolicited job opportunities from New Directions.

How to avoid recruitment fraud

To protect yourself from recruitment fraud please keep in mind:

- New Directions recruiters use an email address that ends in @ndbh.com
- New Directions follows a formal interview process with job applicants that always includes an in-person interview with a New Directions employee
- New Directions does not request financial information during the recruiting process

If you feel like your personal or financial information has been compromised, please contact your local authorities. You may also consider contacting your financial institution if you have shared banking information related to this scam.

We are taking this matter seriously and working to terminate this fraudulent scheme.
